TEMPER IN TREATING STOR The farmer's stock around him partakes more or less of the quality of the owner or those who attend upon it. A man's influence is imparted to his beasts, particularly the horses, the working cattle, and the milch cows. A manof irascible temper gets up nervous-ness in a horse or a cow. The brute becomes afraid of him; and, if of a vicious nature, is apt to be hurtfully, spitefully influenced perhaps irreclai nably spoiled-whereas a mild-tempered, discriminate man wiil gradually smooth down the asperities of a harm disposition. We have known milch cows wild as deer, brought to a placed tractability. The man is a superior and his superior influence will be communicated. Wise stock men keep fools and irritants out of their yards .- St. Louis Rural

IRELAND is larger than Portugal, which has been for ages an independent monarchy. She is larger than Holland, Belgium and Switzerland united. Her area is more extensive than that of Greece and Denmark put together. Ireland is larger than Naples and Sicily; larger than Bavaria and Saxony. She exceeds in extent Sardinia, Wartemburg, and the Grand Duchy of Baden. In short, fifteen European States are inferior to Ireland in extent of territory, and there are only six superior to her-France Briton, Austria, Russia, Prussia and Spain. Thus all the elements of national freedom abound in Tre land-elements which are well known to England accordingly to Montesquieu; for they have provoked the bitter jealousy of that country, and stimulated her to hate, enchain, and trample on Ireland. Owing to these advantages, England has been a sister to Ireland in precisely the same sense in which the sanguinary Cain was a brother to innocent Abel - Doublin People

Apropos to all this, the Montana Post, which has just arrived, contains a lengthy letter by Judge Hosmer on the Indian Treaty, which he attended at Fort Sully, October 21st. General. Ite gives synopses of some of the chiefs' remarks, during the session of the Council One of them, among other things, remarked defautly and sarcastically : We do not like your building forts upon our lands. We do not like to see the little piles of earth thrown up for we know that roads will follow. They will frighten the buffalo, and the buffale we live upon. Can't you see? You know this. You lie when you say you do not. We will be at peace, if you will let us clone. We show you our papers. There is not an arrow or ball on them. They were given to as by the big captain who swears, (meaning Gen. Hurney,) the chief with the gray beard. Tell our Great Father these things," In this strain this man continued, and gave the Commission much trouble, but finally he came forward and signed the treaty by touching the pen six times—being once for each of the causes he had arrayed against the whites. One old chief who followed him, laughingly said: "Who is afraid to sign this paper? I will sign it with my feet and hands, both!"

The paternal policy being pursued by the Government will not meet the ap-prebation of the people of the Territor-ies, who have faith in extermination only. How far it may succeed in allaying present difficulties, it is impossible termine. For my own part, I think the Indians are treacherous, insincere, and will observe their treaty obligations pay. The drift of their speeches here has been to convey the impression that they are a much injured people; that the whites are constantly imposing upon them; that they are the owners of the soil, and that these treaty aarangements are dictated by fear. "What," said White Hawk, a Brule chief, a few days not only the State of Chihuahua but Si.

Sam Bowles on Mormondom.

The following is from one of Bowles' letters about this place, published in the Springfield Republican. We give it, knowing it will prove as interesting as any leader which might occupy its place, just now:

In many cases, Mormon wives not only support themselves and their children, but help to support their husbands. Thus a clerk, or a man with similar limited income, who has yielded to the fascinations and desires of three or four women, and married them all, makes his home with No. 1, perhaps, and the rest live apart, each by herself, taking in sewing or washing, or engaging in other employment, to keep up her establish-ment, and be no charge to her husband. He comes round once in a while to make her a visit, and then she sets out an extra table, and spends all her accumulated earnings to make him as comfortable and herself as charming as possible, so that her fraction of the dear sainted man may be multiplied as much as possible. So the fellow, if he is lazy, and has turned his piety to the good account of geting smart wives, may really board around continually, and live in clover, at no personal expense but his own clothing. is not this a divine institution indeed?

When President Young goes on a jourmey through the territory, on public or private business, he takes a considera-ble retinue with bim, and always a wife and a barber. The former is more his servant than his companion in such cases, however. His honsehold is said to be admirably managed. A son in-law acts as commissary; the wives have nothing to do with the table or its supply; and whenever they wast new clothes or pocket-money they must go to this chief-officer or head of the family bureau. Considering his opportunities, the head of the Church of Latter-Day Saints has made rather a source selection of women made rather a sorry selection of women on the score of beauty.

The second president and favorite prophet of the Church, Heber Kimball, who, is church and theatre, keeps the cold from his bare head and the divine afflatus in, by throwing a red bandanna bandkerchief over it, is even less fortunate in the beauty of his wives; it is rather an imposition upon the word beauty, indeed, to suggest it in their presence: Handsome women and girls, in fact, are scarce among the Mormons of Balt Lake—the fewer Gentiles can show more of them. Why is this? Is good-looking women being supposed to have more etunces of matrimony than their plainer sisters, do they insist upon having the whole of one man, and leave the Morsion husbands to those whose chice is like Hobson's? The only possible that whose family sizely we lygamist into whose family circle we were freely admitted had, however, found two very pretty manen to divide him between them and I must confess they appear to take this chare of bim quite resignedly, it not amignably. They were English, and of nearly equal years; ap-

Richmond, Va., Nov. 27. Gen. Grant freely expressed an opin-ion in regard to Mexican affairs here. He said emphatically that the advent of Maximilian to the pretended throne of Mexico was a part of the rebellion, and his immediate expulsion, should be a part of its history. France did not ask our consent to establish him on that throne, and we should not consult that power in the reestablishing the republic. He said France bad no right to interfere in the question, but if it choose to involve berself in war with the United States on this point, now is the time while our army and navy are yet organ-

Washington, Oct. 29. News from El Paso was received this evening by Romero, Mexican Minister, that the recent movement of the Naffonal forces in Mexico compelled the French at Chihuahua to evacuate that City and State, and withdraw to Durango. On the 25th of Oct., the evacuation began. Four days later not a single French soldier was left in Chibuabua.

In consequence of the inclemency of the weather this new Temple of the Drama was not so largely attended as we could have wished, although the house was well filled and an unwonted number of ladies smiled and stone in the boxes and dress eircle. There was much interest manifested among the "gentfles" as there should have been among the more saintly portion of the community, the occasion being the presentation of a home production, the fine three act play of "The Spy of the Potomac," written expressly for the Irwins by Mr. E. L. Sloan of this city. The piece displays more than ordinary dramatic ability in the author, and, abounding in patriotic sentiments, does credit to his loyalty and good sense. There is a good deal of action in the play, and with a first rate "Carolina," the "Spy" would go off with marked eclat. Col. Merrivale (Mr. Irwin) is a fair character, and was well performed. The subordinate characters were quite well sustained by the company. But the centre of the play, the cynosure of ell eyes, who kept up the spirit and action of the piece, was the witty, talka-tive. inquisitive and triumphant Biddy

O'Haherty.
In this character the author has shown a deep fund of bumor and genuine, a disposition to keep the army of the vacity, action, and rich brogge, made the most of it.

The following is the celebrated song which created such intense excitement throughout Great Britain, and for the incorporation of which in his piece, Mr. Bourcicault's play of "Arrah na Pogue," had to be withdrawn from the London stage : " ...

Oh! Paddy dear, and did you hear
The news that's going round?
The Shamrock is forbid by law to Grow on Irish ground.
No more St. Patrick's day we'll keep,
The color can't be seen.
For there's a bloody law against the

For there's a bloody law against the
Wearing of the green.
I met with happy Tander, and be took
Me by we's laws.
And he said "How's poor onld Ireland,
And how does she stand!"
She's the most distressful country that
Ever you have seen;
They're langing men and women there for
"Wearing of the green."

Then since the color we must wear is England's cruel red. ure Irelaud's sons will se'er forget the Blood that they have shed. You may take the Shamrock from your hat

And cast it on the sod;
It will take root and flourish there,
Though under foot it's trod,
When the law can keep the blades of grass
From growing as they grow. And when the leaves in summer time Their verdure dare not show,
Then I will charge the color.
I wear in my caubeen;
But till that day, please God, I'll stick

To wearing of the green. But if at last the color should Be torn from Ireland's heart, Be torn from Ireland's heart,
Her sons with shame and sorrow from
The dear old soil will part.
Fre beard whispers of a country
That lies beyond the sen,
Where rich and poor stand equal in
The light of Freedom's day,
Oh! Erin, must we leave you, driven
By the tyrant's hand?

By the tyrant's hand? By the tyrant's nand?

Must we seek a mother's welcome from

A strange but happy land,

Where the curel cross of Bugland's

Thrhidom never shall be seen.

And where thank God! we'll live and die

Still wearing of the green.
